

Freddie Lieberman

Freddie's first foray into the world of art was when, at age 3, she covered her grandparents' freshly painted walls with a crayon mural. It was almost her last foray into anything.

In 1965 she received her BFA in Art Education from the University of Illinois and then attended classes of her choosing at the Art Institute of Chicago. After teaching art at the high school level for several years, she decided to use her training and talent as a free-lance artist. She painted wall murals, life-size sports figures, wall graphics and specialty finishes on walls and furniture. Later she designed and painted chairs and benches which were actually portraits. All of the above can be found in homes, restaurants, and businesses in Arizona as well as all over the country.

Recently, she put these commissions on hold to follow a deep desire to paint strictly from emotion using colors and techniques that truly excite her. No planning, measuring, submitting for approval-how totally liberating!

ARTIST'S STATEMENT

An accumulation of lifetime experiences all contribute to the person we are today. I paint using many layers of translucent glazes-each adding to the richness of the finished work. These layers continuously alter the painting but each contributes to the final result-even the very first brushstrokes.
